

I am surprised that the FCC would even consider BPL. It has the potential for much interference with other radio equipment. Power lines already carry an excess of noise. It is not really needed as there already are other services to choose from. While the petitioners propose offering their service in areas that are not well covered by the other services, it is just a ploy to get their foot in the door. The BPL proposal should receive a flat denial!